On the dark corner of the street soldiers, policemen and newspaper men kept vigil, however sheltered beneath their tents. The 9.30 bulletin, as was promised, was to be the last of the night, and while it was brief, attention was called to the fact that the pulse was exactly that the temperature was 8-10 of a degree lower, was highly favorable symptoms.

Senator Hanna was the last official caller at the house. He only stayed a few minutes, but during that time had a short interview with Dr. McBurney. When he came out he declined to talk on all guests with every comfort as further than to say:

"Everything is all right, and if the improvement continues I may go home tomorrow."
